1.0 Introduction

This report presents findings from the daily monitoring of selected programs on 30 radio stations in Ghana. The data was collected from June 2024 to February 2025. It specifically cites the number of indecent expressions recorded, categorizes these expressions, and identifies the individuals who made the remarks. Additionally, it lists the radio stations where these expressions were made as well as hosts who made indecent remarks. The report concludes with recommendations for relevant stakeholders.

1.1 Background

For the past 32 years, Ghana has maintained a relatively peaceful and democratically stable environment, earning global recognition and favourable rankings. Notably, in the 2022 Global Peace Index (GPI) Report, Ghana was ranked as the most peaceful country in West Africa, 2nd in Africa, and 40th worldwide – an improvement over its 2019 and 2020 rankings. However, the 2023 index saw a significant decline, with Ghana falling to 51st globally, 4th in Africa, and 2nd in West Africa. This decline in rankings is attributed to several factors, including divisive narratives that exacerbate polarization along partisan, ethnic, religious, and chieftaincy lines, as well as the rise of radicalism. These narratives often manifest through hate speech, inflammatory language, political propaganda, and misinformation disseminated via radio.

During election periods, Ghana often witnesses the use of abusive and inappropriate language directed at political opponents, institutions, and other groups. Unfortunately, some radio stations allow political parties and their representatives to misuse the airwaves, with little or no intervention from hosts or presenters. This unchecked behaviour tends to escalate political tensions every four years. In a proactive move to address this issue, the Media Foundation for West Africa (MFWA) has been implementing a language monitoring project since 2012. This initiative monitors, reports, and publicly identifies individuals who engage in hate speech and indecent expressions on radio.

Building on insights gained from the 2012, 2016, and 2020 language monitoring projects, the MFWA is once again monitoring radio broadcasts during the 2024 election season. The goal is to contribute to Ghana's peace and democratic stability by fostering a national culture that rejects hate speech, incitement to violence, and other divisive narratives while promoting a narrative of peaceful coexistence and respectful political discourse. The project involves daily monitoring of selected programs on various radio stations to track and report the use of hate speech and other inappropriate language by politicians and other participants. It also assesses the effectiveness of presenters or hosts in moderating these programs.

2.0 Methodology

The project involves the daily monitoring of expressions used by politicians and other actors who feature on radio programmes such as news bulletins, political discussions and current affairs discussions. It also involves assessing and reporting how presenters or moderators of selected programmes on radio stations handle their programmes and whether they tolerate the use of hate speech and other indecent language on their programmes. This report covers the monitoring of 30 radio stations in Ghana from June 1, 2024, to February 28, 2024. The stations were selected based on findings from previous reports, perceived allegiance to or ownership by politicians or politically exposed persons, and geographical spread. Table 1 presents names and regional locations of the 30 radio stations that were monitored under the current phase of the project.

3.0 Findings

Table 2 presents the main subjects of news stories, programs, or discussions monitored on the 30 radio stations in Ghana during the monitoring period. The monitoring data captures campaign narratives, before, during and post-election discussions, reflecting the political and social climate following the December 7, 2024, elections and the swearing-in of the new president on January 7, 2025. The findings presented in Table 2 reflect the distribution of 814 cases of indecent expressions authored across 30 radio stations in Ghana between June 1, 2024, and February 28, 2025.

The data reveals that elections-related issues were the dominant subject, accounting for 408 cases, or 50% of the total. This overwhelming figure reflects the politically charged atmosphere surrounding the 2024 general elections and highlights how electoral debates often become a platform for hostile rhetoric. The high number of incidents in this category underscores the need for continued scrutiny and regulation during election periods, especially as discussions around electoral reforms, voter registration, and campaign activities tend to evoke strong emotions and partisan tensions. The second most common context for indecent expressions was political party activities and issues, contributing 103 cases or 13% of the total. The catch-all “Other” category followed with 30 cases (4%), suggesting that even beyond the major political topics, miscellaneous discussions on air can also give rise to inappropriate language.

Table 2: Main subject of news story/programme/discussion

Category	Total	Percent
Elections-related issues	408	50
Political party activities/issues	103	13
Other	30	4

Constitutional matters	17	2
Security	13	2
Labour issues	10	1
Business/ Finance	9	1
Crime	9	1
Chieftaincy issues	7	1
	814	100

Moderate levels of indecent expressions were recorded in discussions of corruption (44 cases, 5%), Presidential/Vice-Presidential affairs (41 cases, 5%), Parliament (33 cases, 4%), development projects (30 cases, 4%), conflicts and demonstrations (30 cases, 4%), and illegal mining (30 cases, 4%). These subjects, while not as dominant as election-related content, are clearly significant in the public discourse and often elicit passionate reactions from commentators and political actors. Their frequency points to the contentious and sometimes polarizing nature of governance and development challenges in the country.

Other areas such as constitutional matters (17 cases, 2%), security (13 cases, 2%), labour issues (10 cases, 1%), business/finance (9 cases, 1%), crime (9 cases, 1%), and chieftaincy issues (7 cases, 1%) recorded relatively low numbers of indecent expressions. Although these topics are of national relevance, their lower incidence may be attributed either to less frequent discussion or to a more restrained tone of discourse when they are addressed.

3.1 Categories of Indecent Expressions Recorded

Table 3 categorizes the types of indecent language violations identified during the period under review, revealing the nature and severity of inappropriate comments made on radio. The data on types of language violations recorded on air from June 2024 to February 2025 reveals that the most prevalent form of indecent expression was insulting and offensive remarks or comments, which accounted for 460 out of the 814 total cases, representing 57%. This dominant trend underscores the hostile and often personal nature of political discourse on radio, particularly during the election season. The peak in such expressions occurred in October and November, a period likely marked by intensified political campaigning and heightened partisan exchanges, reflecting how easily conversations can descend into verbal attacks in a competitive electoral environment.

The second most common category was unsubstantiated allegations, contributing 211 cases or 26% of all violations. These typically involve participants making serious claims or accusations without evidence, which can significantly undermine public trust and sow confusion or misinformation. The highest number of such cases occurred from October to December, which coincides with the period when political narratives are often shaped to discredit opponents or influence public opinion.

Remarks calling for confrontation or violence, either overtly or subtly ranked third, accounting for 42 cases or 5% of total violations. While fewer in number, such expressions are deeply concerning given their potential to incite real-world unrest. Similarly, inflammatory and provocative remarks (32 cases, 4%) and expressions promoting divisiveness (23 cases, 3%) also featured, albeit to a lesser extent. These kinds of language reinforce polarization and can further inflame already tense political and ethnic divisions. Innuendoes, defined as indirect references to unpleasant or rude ideas, made up 21 cases or 3%. Although more subtle than overt insults, innuendoes still contribute to the toxic nature of discussions by spreading veiled accusations or disdain. There were also 14 instances (2%) of tribal slurs, prejudice, and bigotry, which are particularly dangerous in a multicultural society like Ghana's, as they can fuel ethnic tensions. Finally, gender-specific insults were recorded 11 times, making up just 1% of the total. While the number is low, the presence of such expressions highlights the continued marginalization and verbal abuse faced by women in political and public discourse.

3.2 Radio Stations and Incidents of Indecent Expressions Recorded

The data from Table 4 provides a breakdown of language violations across the 30 radio stations monitored under the period under review. The data reveals a concentration of incidents on a few key outlets (see figure 1), suggesting that certain platforms became hotspots for indecent expressions, particularly during politically sensitive periods.

Oman FM registered the highest number of violations, accounting for 192 cases or 23.6% of the total. This makes nearly one in every four recorded incidents traceable to this single station, signalling a persistent challenge with content moderation and presenter responsibility on its platform. Closely following is Power FM, with 177 cases (21.7%), indicating that over 45% of all indecent expressions were aired on just these two stations. Both outlets are known for their strong political affiliations, and the data underscores how such alignments can sometimes foster a permissive environment for inflammatory and offensive language.

Accra FM ranked third with 88 cases (10.8%), still a significant figure, pointing to its role as another major contributor to problematic discourse. A cluster of other stations including Radio Tamale (46 cases, 5.7%), Haske FM (42 cases, 5.2%), Wontumi Radio (37 cases, 4.5%), and Ashh FM (32 cases, 3.9%) also recorded notable levels of violations, suggesting a wider geographical spread of the problem beyond the capital.

The remaining stations, Adom FM, Radio Justice, Shaft FM, Kessben FM, Radio Gold, Oyerepa FM, among others, each contributed between 1–3% of the total cases. A long tail of stations such as Asempa FM, Happy FM, Winners FM, Link Radio, Angel FM, Okay FM, and Zaa Radio recorded just one to four incidents each, together forming less than 5% of the total. This distribution indicates that while the problem is widespread, a few high-profile stations are disproportionately responsible.

3.3. Social Media Broadcast

The data reveals that a majority of the language violations (72%) occurred on programmes that were streamed live on Facebook, amounting to 585 cases. This indicates that Facebook became a key channel through which radio content were disseminated to wider audiences beyond traditional listenership. In comparison, 226 violations (28%) were recorded on programmes streamed live on YouTube, suggesting that while YouTube is also a notable platform for live radio content, it is less frequently used for streaming such programmes than Facebook. The prevalence of violations on Facebook live-streamed content underscores the expanding influence of social media in political communication and discourse, as well as the risks it poses when moderation is weak. With real-time engagement and broader reach, platforms like Facebook can amplify the spread of intemperate language and misinformation.

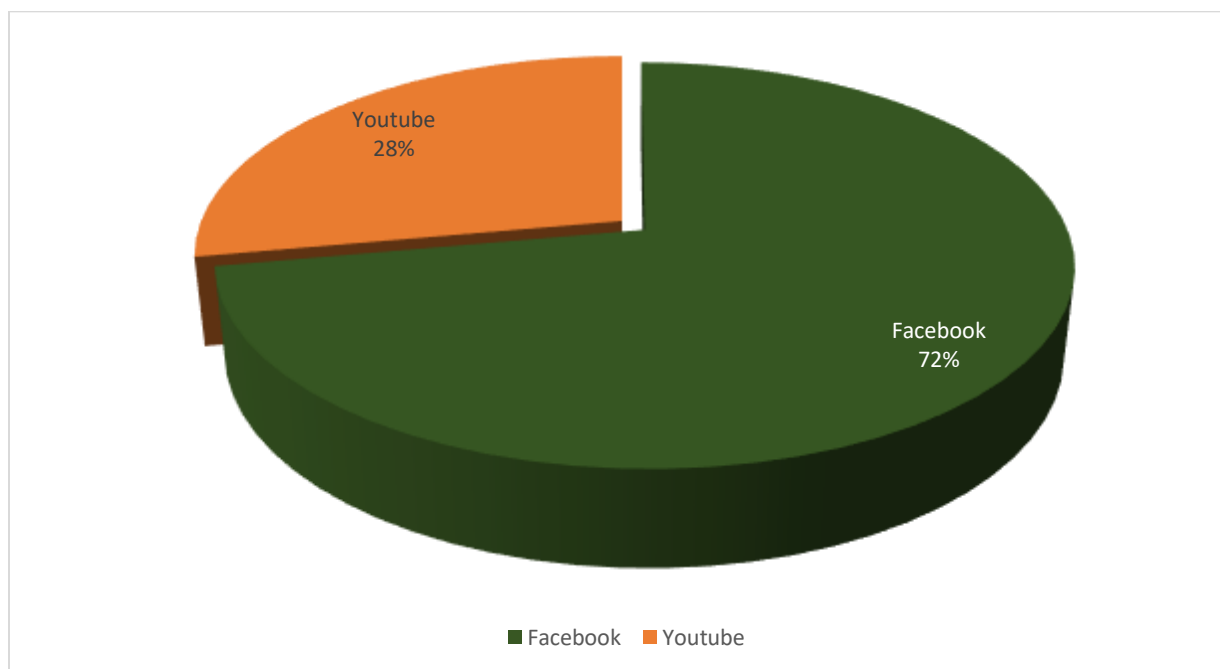

Figure 2: Social Media platforms that broadcasted violations live on radio

3.4 Culprits of Indecent Expressions Used on Radio

Table 5 shows the names of the top 28 individuals who authored the 814 indecent expressions. The findings reveal that leading the chart is Mugabe Maase, who was responsible for 85 incidents, representing 10% of all recorded violations. Kwabena Bobie Anasah follows with 69 violations (8%), and Oheneba Boamah Bennie with 60 incidents (7%), indicating that a small group of high-profile commentators or presenters are responsible for a significant portion of the violations. Other notable offenders include Robbicom Mornahson (39 cases), Suhail Abdul-Mumin (28), Yaw Amofa Boakye (28), and Listowell Nana Poku (24). These individuals collectively account for a substantial portion of the offensive content, suggesting the presence of repeat violators whose behaviour may be emboldened by a lack of deterrence or accountability mechanisms.

The appearance of categories such as “Unknown” (12 cases) and “Unidentified Text Message Sender” (7 cases) indicates challenges in attribution, particularly in cases involving anonymous call-ins or messages. This underlines the importance of better moderation strategies and clearer broadcasting policies to prevent the airing of unvetted and potentially harmful content. Figures with public or political affiliations, such as Blessed Godsbrain Smart (Captain Smart), Kwame Baffoe Abronye, Anthony Nupkenu, Kwadwo Twum Boafo, and Chairman Wontumi, are listed among those responsible for violations. Their inclusion emphasizes the influence of political actors in shaping public discourse, often through provocative and divisive commentary. The full list of all individuals cited for indecent campaign language is provided in the appendix of this report.

4.0 Assessment of Moderation of Programmes by Hosts

As part of the radio campaign language monitoring, the role of moderators or show hosts was assessed. The data on moderator or host intervention in response to indecent expressions paints a worrying picture of passive broadcasting practices. Out of a total of 814 recorded incidents of indecent expressions on radio, only 114 cases (14%) saw any attempt by moderators or show hosts to correct or call out the offending language. In a striking 86% of the cases (700 incidents), there was no attempt whatsoever by the program moderators to intervene or promote more respectful dialogue.

This overwhelmingly high rate of non-intervention suggests a systemic tolerance, complicity, or lack of capacity among radio hosts when it comes to managing on-air conduct. Given the significant influence of radio programming in Ghana, especially during politically charged periods such as elections, this inaction can have serious implications. It not only emboldens political actors and commentators to continue using indecent and inflammatory language but also undermines efforts to cultivate responsible media and promote peaceful political engagement.

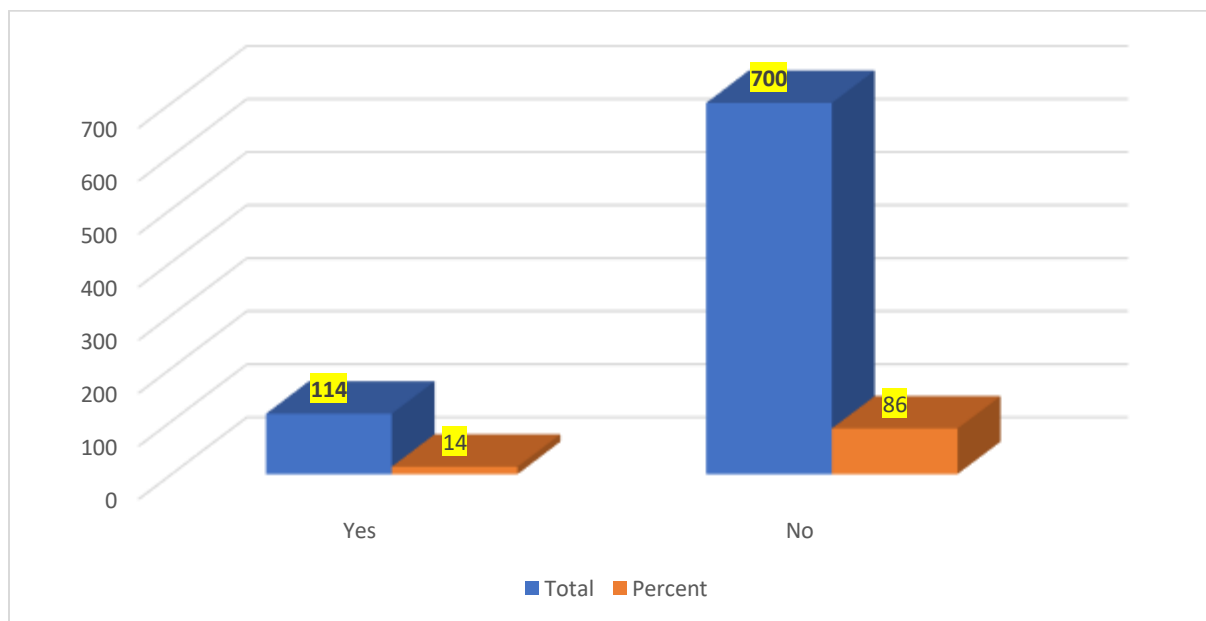

Figure 3: Attempts by show hosts/moderators to correct the use of indecent language on air

5.0 Categories of Culprits

The data on the status of culprits behind indecent expressions on radio reveals that show hosts and hostesses were the worst offenders, accounting for 369 incidents or 45% of all violations recorded. This is not only significant but also deeply concerning, as these individuals are expected to uphold ethical standards, guide conversations, and maintain decorum on air. Instead, they have become the primary source of inflammatory, offensive, and divisive language on radio platforms.

This trend is not surprising because the top six offenders: Mugabe Maase (85 cases), Kwabena Bobie Anasah (69), Oheneba Boamah Bennie (60), Robbicom Mornahson (39), Suhail Abdul-Mumin (28), and Yaw Amofa Boakye (28), are all radio show hosts. Their dominant presence on this list highlights the central role hosts play in shaping the tone and quality of radio discourse. Rather than serving as moderators who ensure civil and constructive engagement, many have used their platforms to promote personal or partisan agendas, often through offensive or inflammatory remarks.

6.0 Conclusion and Recommendations

This report presents the consolidated findings from a comprehensive daily language monitoring exercise conducted between June 1, 2024, and February 28, 2025, spanning the pre-election, election, and post-election periods of Ghana's 2024 general elections. The exercise covered 30 strategically selected radio stations across the country. These stations were chosen based on prior evidence of problematic content, perceived political affiliations, and geographical spread to ensure national representativeness.

The monitoring focused on programs such as news bulletins, political talk shows, and current affairs discussions, with an emphasis on tracking the language used by politicians, public figures, and radio hosts, as well as evaluating how moderators handled indecent expressions on their platforms. Thirty trained monitors were assigned to the stations and equipped with validated monitoring instruments and digital recorders to document indecent expressions daily. Their reports were reviewed and analysed by MFWA's research team to produce this consolidated report.

A total of 814 indecent expressions were recorded during the period, with a significant portion occurring in the context of election-related discourse, including campaigning, governance debates, and inter-party rivalries. Election-related discussions alone accounted for half of all violations, underscoring how election seasons can intensify the use of inflammatory and divisive rhetoric on radio.

Certain radio stations especially those known for their strong political affiliations stood out for their high number of violations. Oman FM, Power FM, Accra FM, and a cluster of other stations including Radio Tamale, Haske FM, Wontumi Radio, and Ashh FM also recorded notable levels of violations, suggesting a wider geographical spread of the problem beyond the capital.

The data reveals a deeply concerning trend: radio hosts emerged as the worst offenders, responsible for 45% of the total violations. This is further reinforced by the fact that the top six most frequent individual culprits: Mugabe Maase, Kwabena Bobie Anasah, Oheneba Boamah Bennie, Robbicom Mornahson, Suhail Abdul-Mumin, and Yaw Amofa Boakye, are all show hosts. Instead of playing their expected role as gatekeepers of responsible discourse, many hosts actively contributed to the spread of insults, unsubstantiated allegations, and inciteful language.

Moreover, in 86% of the instances, moderators made no attempt to correct or caution their guests or callers, reflecting either complicity or negligence in curbing indecent speech. This failure is particularly alarming during an election period, when tensions are high, and media content has a strong potential to influence public opinion, incite divisions, or undermine peace. The report also draws attention to the significant role of social media in amplifying harmful content. 72% of the offensive material recorded was live streamed on Facebook, and 28% on YouTube, vastly expanding the audience for such content and making regulation even more challenging.

In consideration of the above findings, the MFWA calls on key stakeholders such as the National Media Commission (NMC), National Communications Authority (NCA), media owners, political parties, and civil society to take urgent steps to address these challenges, including:

- Enforcing ethical broadcasting guidelines consistently before, during, and after elections.
- Sanctioning repeat offenders and politically aligned media houses that encourage hate speech.
- Building the capacity of hosts and producers to moderate responsibly and ethically.
- Monitoring and managing the amplification of offensive content through digital platforms.
- Promoting civic education and media literacy among citizens, particularly during election periods.
